WHO IS DOCTOR WHO?

Just about the most popular character of British television, that's 'Who'.

For 24 years now, the mysterious Time Lord, who bears this name has been shuttling through time and space, sorting out galactic problems and vanquishing monsters, to the immense delight of a weekly multi-million audience.

The Doctor is a national institution; an outstanding character of modern fiction whose charismatic quality has triggered off one of the biggest merchandising packages associated with a British tv programme; as well as a score of active fan clubs throughout the world.

Sixty countries share the British enthusiasm for the Doctor Who series.

The Doctor is a Time Lord, the possessor of two hearts, a body temperature of 60 degrees fahrenheit and over 900 years old. Bored with Gallifrey, his own super-advanced planet, and fellow Time Lords, he roams through space and time in a personalised ship - the Tardis (Time And Relative Dimensions In Space).

In practice his space-ship is temperamental and unreliable. The chameleon circuit having jammed on a visit to London in the sixties left the Tardis exterior as a police box!

Nor is the Doctor himself infallible. Part of his appeal is his problem-solving capacity when things go wrong, making do with bits and pieces of electronic gadgetry that just happen to be around.

The Doctor has the ability to regenerate into a new body; to date there have been 7 Doctors, each very different, played by William Hartnell, Patrick Troughton, Jon Pertwee, Tom Baker, Peter Davison, Colin Baker and currently Sylvester McCoy.

Doctor Who is not a children's programme - it appeals to all age groups and to people from all walks of life. It is a fantasy programme of good against evil - a departure into fun and adventure

THE MAKING OF 'DOCTOR WHO'

The following gives a basic idea of how a 'Doctor Who' programme is made:-

(1) SCRIPTS

The producer and script editor commission the writers.

(2) PRODUCTION SCHEDULE

Directors, production teams, designers, etc are allocated and the production schedule of rehearsals, filming and studios is planned.

(3) PRODUCTION

The director will join the programme approximately seven weeks before actual production begins and he and his team, which consists of a production manager, an assistant floor manager and a production assistant, begin to plan the programme. There will be script meetings with the producer and script editor which may result in re-writes of the script and planning meetings with the set designer, costume designer, make-up artist, technical manager, visual effects designer and other television servicing departments. Actors and actresses are cast and rehearsals take place about ten days before the studio recording.

A four-part 'Doctor Who' story will normally comprise one week's outside filming and five days studio recording. The studio recording is split into two sessions of two and three days with at least a ten day rehearsal gap.

Once the entire story has been filmed and recorded on videotape it is edited. The edited tape will then be reviewed by the director, composer and Radiophonics who decide where the music and special sound effects should be placed. The composer will then write the music, record the music and at the Sypher Dub, which is the final stage in making the programme, the music and sound effects are dubbed onto the edited tape.

The completed programme will then be reviewed by the producer and BBC Drama executives.

(4) TRANSMISSION

A season of 'Doctor Who' consists of 14 x 25 minute episodes. transmitted weekly.

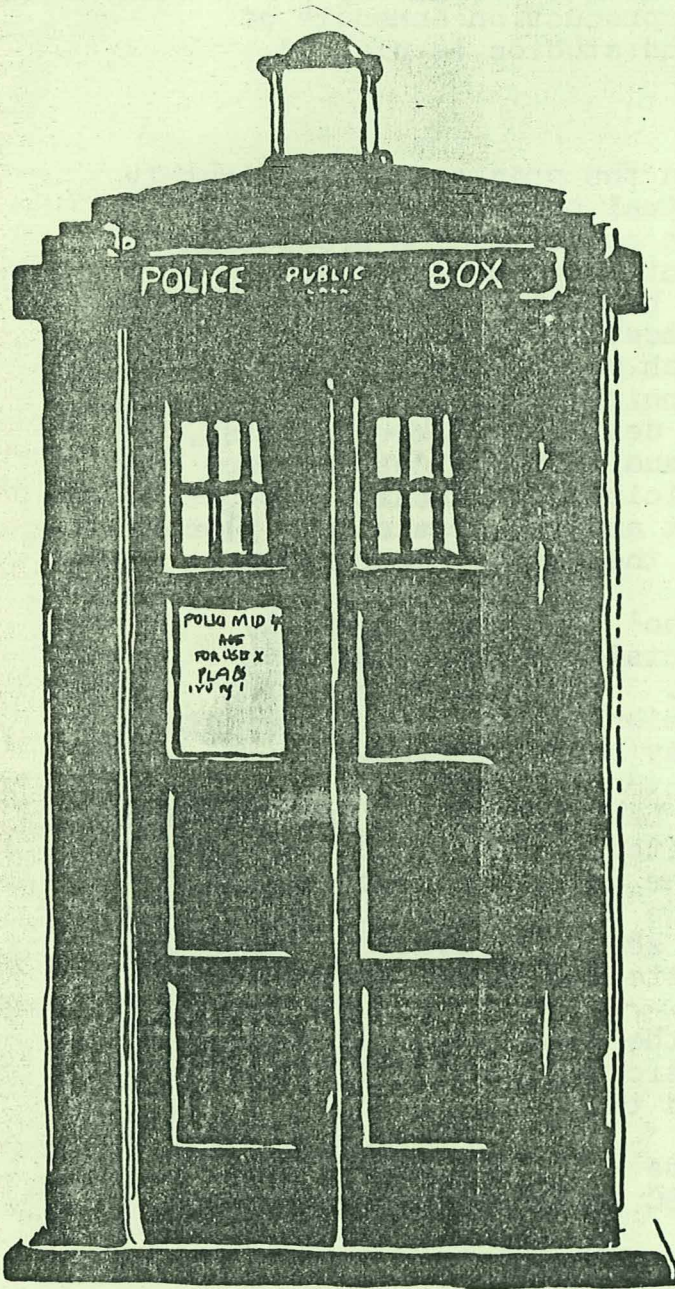

THE TARDIS

TARDIS = Time And Relative
Dimensions In Space

The Tardis' special facility of appearing smaller on the outside than its internal dimensions was demonstrated when the Doctor held two cubes of the same size, one close to his eye and the other far away. Naturally the cube nearer seemed larger than the distant cube.

The Tardis' principle enables both cubes to occupy the same space at the same time thus accommodating the anomaly.

BIOGRAPHY

Sylvester McCoy played the title role in 'The Pied Piper' at the National Theatre which finished on 17th February.

Prior to the Piper, he played Feste in 'Twelfth Night' for Nancy Meckler at Leicester Haymarket, he also won high praise as Tranio in 'The Taming of the Shrew' and Pompey in 'Antony and Cleopatra', both at the Haymarket Theatre with Vanessa Redgrave and Timothy Dalton. At the Lyric, Hammersmith, he played Renfield in 'Dracula' and Erik Satie in 'Satie's Night' (which was written for him by Adrian Mitchell). Other stage work includes Asdak in 'Caucasian Chalk Circle' at the Young Vic, Androcles in 'Androcles and the Lion' for Bristol Old Vic, Stephano in 'The Tempest' at Ludlow Festival, and Buster Keaton in the play 'Buster's Last Stand', written for him by Peter Fieldson. Sylvester also played in 'Can't Pay? Won't Pay' at the Criterion, 'Abbacadabra' at the Lyric, and Samuel in 'Pirates of Penzance' at Drury Lane with Bonnie Langford. He took 'Gone with Hardy' from London to Canada, playing Stan Laurel.

His earlier stage work included 'A Midsummer's Night's Dream' for Welsh Opera Company, 'Servant of Two Masters' in Nottingham and on tour, 'The Soldier's Tale' at Oxford, and Dame in pantomime at Stratford East. He has also worked on many occasions with Ken Campbell in 'The Ken Campbell Road Show'.

Sylvester's television and film work include a leading role in the Cannon film 'Three Kinds of Heat' soon to be released; Birdie Bowers in Central TV's series 'Last Place on Earth'; 'Eureka'; (three series to date), 'Tiswas', 'Big Jim and the Figaro Club', and 'Jigsaw' for the BBC; 'Starstrider' for Granada; and 'Dramarama' and 'Number 73' for TVS. He also played in 'The Secret Policeman's Ball' and in the Olivier film version of 'Dracula'.

graduated from manchester University with a drama degree and spent a year singing in the working men's clubs round the City. She then returned to London, her native City, where she has been working mainly in musical theatre for children, most recently appearing as 'Gretel' in an adaptation of Humperdink's opera, "Hansel & Gretel" for Polka Theatre, which she followed with "Fiddler On The Roof" at Manchester Opera House, in which she played a Villager and understudied 'Hodel'. She has also worked in tours and seasons with Theatre of Thelema, Bug Theatre and the Artaud Theatre Company. "Doctor Who" is Sophie's first venture into television. Her interests are motor bike riding and playing football!

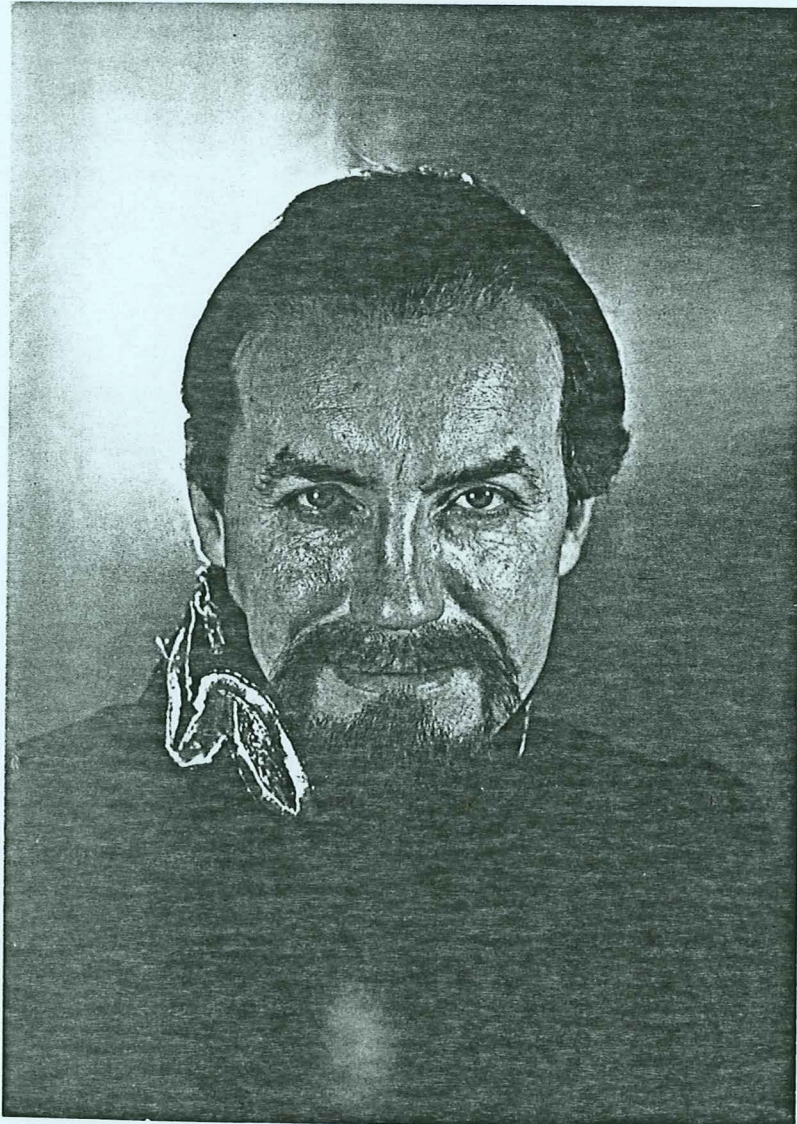

BIOGRAPHY: ANTHONY AINLEY

Anthony trained at RADA. He has appeared in theatres in Watford, Windsor, Liverpool and Worthing.

Among his films are: 'OH WHAT A LOVELY WAR', 'MERCHANT OF VENICE', 'THE DEVIL'S TOUCH', 'ASSAULT', 'KING LEAR', 'LAND THAT TIME FORGOT' and 'INSPECTOR CLOUSEAU'.

His numerous television appearances include: 'IT'S DARK OUTSIDE', 'THE PALLISERS', 'NICHOLAS NICKLEBY', 'SPYDER'S WEB' and 'UPSTAIRS DOWNSTAIRS'.
